Marina

Chennai's Seashore hosts the second longest urban beach in the world, stretching for 13 kms (8 miles) along the eastern flank. The Marina, connecting Fort St. George with San Thome Basilica almost 5 kilometres away, was built by Mounstuart Elphinstone Grant Duff, the governor between 1881 and 1886. Described by architectural historian Phillip Davies as "One of the most beautiful marine Promenades in the World". It is a favourite place for Chennai's citizens to escape the humidity and enjoy the sea breeze. The walk along Kamarajar Salai takes in parks, tree-lined cobbled streets, spectacular colonial and Indo-Saracenic Buildings.

Parks & Sanctuaries

Vandalur Zoo

The Arignar Anna Zoological Park, popularly known as the Vandalur Zoo is located in Vandalur, which is about 30 kilometers from Chennai city. Chennai has the distinction of having the first public zoo in India as early as 1855. It was originally situated near Park Town in the Chennai city. The zoo is located on an area of 1300 acres. This zoo is one of the largest in South Asia.

Guindy National Park

Once a distant suburb which was nearly twice its current size, Guindy has now been engulfed by the fast growing metropolis. A portion of Guindy Lodge was officially declared as Guindy National Park in 1977. This predominantly dry deciduous scrub jungle of acacia is interspersed with larger trees such as Sandalwood Banyan and Jamun. Its most famous residents are the herds of endangered

Blackbuck which was introduced in 1924. Among its 130 species of birds are raptors such as the Honey Buzzard and the Sea Eagle. Winter is the best time for bird watching when migrant birds visit the forest. Also located within the park is the Madras Snake Park established in the 1970s by Romulus Whitaker, the American Zoologist, who also set up the Crocodile bank outside Chennai. Today, the well maintained Snake Park houses numerous species of snakes, among them are king cobras, vipers and pythons. Other reptiles include crocodiles, turtles and lizards. Large information boards, strategically placed, provide interesting details on the various species. For those who are interested, there are live demonstrations of venom extraction. The venom is used as an antidote for snake bites.

Anna Park

The walk starts from the victory War Memorial which marks the north end of Kamarajar Salai. This memorial originally commemorated the victory of the Allied armies during World War I and was later dedicated to the memory of those soldiers from the Madras Presidency who lost their lives in World War II. To its south, in Anna Park, is the Anna Samathi, a memorial erected in honour of CN Annadurai, the former chief minister. Further south is the MGR Samathi, a commemorative garden with gateways and pathways, built in honour of the popular Tamil film icon and chief minister, MG Ramachandran. An array of souvenir shops and eateries can be found along this stretch of the beach attracting tourists from the rest of the state. Particularly interesting is the Sunday market, with its curious jumble of goods.

Crocodile Bank:

Crocodile Bank is situated 42 km from Chennai. This crocodile breeding and research centre is run by Romulus Whitaker. It was set up in 1976. This bank was started to protect India's dwindling crocodile population and to preserve the Irula (Snake catching) tribe's way of life. This bank has already produced more than 6,000 crocodiles. There is also a snake farm where anti-venom is produced. Several species of Indian and African Crocodiles and Alligators bred in captivity are kept here in open pools. The snake venom extractions are a great attraction to the visitors.
